Thursday, March 15. 1716.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated March 20.

Petersburg, February 21.

WE have seen in the Paris Gazettes an Article from Constantinople, which says that the Tartars have taken Possession of the Kingdom of Cazan, &c. But there is little Ground for that Report; for Colonel Schwartz, who is lately arrived from the Governor of Cazan, to make a Report of the State of Affairs in that Country, has given the following Relation. In the Month of December last, 6000 Tartars, neighbouring to the Wolga, commanded by the Son of their Kan, an Allie of the Grand Signior, made an Invasion upon the Kingdom of Cazan; upon which Colonel Schwartz with his Regiment composed of 1200 Germans, drawn out of the Swedish Prisoners taken at Pultowa, pursued them, and overtook them at 40 German Leagues distance from Cazan. The Tartars seeing themselves obliged to Fight or to abandon the Slaves they had taken, made a halt, and covered their Front with about 300 Women, whom they would have exposed to the first discharge of the Russians; but Colonel Schwartz forbid his Men to fire, and commanded them to attack the Tartars in Flank Sword in Hand, which they performed so well, that they cut the greatest part of them to Pieces, took their chief Officers, whom they hanged in the Field, recovered all the Booty, and took 2000 Tartarian Horses, which he distributed in his Regiment, who lost only 20 Men in this Expedition.

Warsaw, March 4. We understand that the Czar has promised to give the Republick Assistance in case they shall want it; and that some Lithuanian Deputies have assured the Marshal of the Confederacy, that their Army shall joyn that of the Confederacy, and that consequently there is little hopes that the Proposals for an Accommodation will be listened to, which gives our Court much Uneasiness. We have a Report that the Duke of Weissenfels has had a Battle with the Poles, and is mortally wounded. But this wants Confirmation.

Vienna, March 4. The Opinions are still divided upon the Subject of a War with the Turks: Those who believe it infallible alledge, that it can hardly be doubted that the Porte will take this Opportunity to break with the Emperor, when many of the chief Potentates of the Empire are employed in the War against Sweden; the Finances of the Emperor are not yet well restored; Poland in Combustion; Venice already weakened by the last Campaign, and the Czar employed in securing his Conquests upon Sweden. And to fortify their Arguments, they urge the Inclination of the common People at Constantinople for the War, and the solemn Processions and Devotions made in Turkey. But others on the contrary are very much of Opinion, that the Turks are not desirous of a War with the Emperor: These argue from the last Letters from M. Fleischman, brought by the British Ambassador's Courier from Constantinople, dated the 10th and 11th of February, which are full indeed of the Preparations the Turks are making to carry on the War in Dalmatia, and to defend themselves against the Emperor in case he will begin the War; but they say at the same time, that by all Appearance, the Porte would be glad to avoid this War. They treat M. Fleischman with great Civility: And when some insolent Populace lately infused his House, the Grand Vizier immediately sent a Guard to disperse them, and made Excuses and Compliments to M. Fleischman on that Occasion. 'Tis true, they shew some Fierceness, and declare they will have in the Month of April a positive Answer on the Part of the Emperor concerning Peace or War. But however they cannot conceal their Apprehensions from the strength of the Emperor's Armies, and the Order, Courage, and Discipline of his Troops. In the mean time the Preparations are carried on with the same Diligence, and all the Imperial Regiments and Generals have repeated Orders to be ready to March next Month. Frequent Conferences are held, and it looks as if some Difficulties are risen in the Councils. The Court is not yet come to Agreement with the Venetians upon some points demanded; and 'tis suspected the Republick go back, and are almost inclined to buy Peace with the Loss of the Morea, and give a good Sum of Money into the Bargain.

Hamburg, March 10. They write from Copenhagen, that the Fleet is armed and wholly equipped, and will sail with the first fair Wind, under the Command of Vice-Admiral Gabel, to prevent the Swedes, who are also ready, but could not yet get out because of the Ice. That Fleet having on board many Troops and Provisions to be put into Wismar, the Danish Admiral is ordered to lie before that Place to hinder any thing entering, which may produce an Engagement. We hear by Letters from the Camp before Wismar, that they begun the Day before to work upon the Forts and Redoubts of the Lines; the Prussian Artillery which had been so long expected being arrived at Nienburg two Leagues from Wismar. His Danish Majesty will depart suddenly for Holstein: And they write from Gottorp that Apartments are already preparing, and 'tis reported the Czar and the King will have an Interview there. Letters from Berlin say, that a great Detachment will suddenly be sent to Landsberg upon the Warre, in order to put that Place into a State of Defence, by reason of the Troubles in Poland: And that his Prussian Majesty will himself go thither to view the Fortifications and give Orders about them, and at the same time receive the Russian Troops designed to assist at the Siege of Wismar who advance apace. His Czarian Majesty is departed from Dantzick, to go by the Way of Pomerania directly to Mecklenburg, where the Duke-Regent is making all imaginable Preparations for his Reception.

Hague,

Monsieur Mortaigne. The Sieur Mortaigne, the Stater's Minister at the Dept of Raribon, has lately written to their High Mightinesses, that the Count de Gregy, Minister of France, is suddenly expected there; and that a Report is spread, that he will make some Proposals in favour of the King of Sweden, which will be undoubtedly supported by several Protestant Princes of the Empire; some whereof talk publicly of it, and have intimated to M. Mortaigne, that it would be for the Benefit of the Protestant Cause, that he should receive Orders to second those Proposals, and desired him to write to their High Mightinesses about it. But 'tis not believed the States will do anything in it, at least till they have received Satisfaction for the many Millions their Subjects have lost by the Depredations of the Swedish Privateers.
